The Bhangra in the Burgh 9 Executive Board of Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh is proud to present our ninth annual Bhangra Competition on Saturday, November 7th, 2015 at Soldiers and Sailors Museum and Memorial Auditorium in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Bhangra in the Burgh is a platform for top Bhangra teams from across the nation to showcase their talent in a colorful exhibition of the energy and excitement that Bhangra represents. Since our first competition in 2007, Bhangra in the Burgh has grown exponentially and currently stands as one of the largest student-run events in Pittsburgh. Over the past eight years, Bhangra in the Burgh has successfully attracted a wide audience each year and raised a total of over $75,000 for charity. With Bhangra in the Burgh 9, we hope to raise a substantial amount for The Pittsburgh Promise, a local charity in Pittsburgh that seeks to provide scholarships for urban youth.

Our objective is to expand the outreach of the competition and showcase the culture, zest, and energy of Bhangra. Being a part of a multicultural community like Pittsburgh, we are very excited that our efforts can also raise funds for The Pittsburgh Promise, a local charity. After having hosted eight enormously successful shows, we invite you to an even bigger and better Bhangra in the Burgh!

Mayur SASA

Mayur SASA, Carnegie Mellon's largest South Asian organization, is a highly active, student organization that sponsors and organizes various social and cultural activities for students. Mayur SASA reaches to not only the South Asian community, but also strives to promote unity, diversity, and interest in the South Asian cultures. The organization's events cater to a variety of interests and motivations and thus attempt to attract all of the student body. In an effort to extend its cultural influence outside of the Carnegie Mellon community, Mayur SASA works closely with the Bhangra in the Burgh Executive Board to achieve its vision.

Philanthropy

Since its founding, "The Pittsburgh Promise has sought to promote academic success and encourage students and their communities to dream big and work hard toward high aspirations and hope. It aspires to replace the deadly culture of low expectations that often permeates urban schools with the belief that inside every child is a promise, and with the appropriate care, effort, and needed resources, that promise will undoubtedly be fulfilled." To date, The Promise, has funded over has given over 64 million dollars in scholarship money. Their efforts have shown visible effects on the city of Pittsburgh as the city's post-secondary education enrollment with two years of high school graduation has increased by 10%.

The values and goals of The Pittsburgh Promise are near and dear to the Bhangra in the Burgh Executive Committee. We are honored to be given the opportunity to support such a tremendous organization.
